Major Richard E. Fleming, at present acting as 2 i/c and formerly Cdr of 'D' Coy, displayed great qualities of leadership on July 18th 1944 in the Battle of The Triangle WEST of BOIS-DE-BURES when commanding 'D' Coy. His Coy had the task of following through and capturing the final objective. The country was thickly wooded and the smoke and confusion of battle made it extremely difficult for Pls to keep touch. All Pl Cdrs had become casualties before the objective was reached, and it was entirely due to this officer's personal leadership and grip of the situation that enabled his Coy to win through. He went about fearlessly under heavy fire rallying his Pls quite regardless of his own personal safety. Finally he led Coy HQ in mopping up an enemy post which had been overlooked by the fwd Pls.

This officer during the whole action acted in a most gallant manner and showed devotion to duty of the highest order. His leadership, cheerfulness, calm bearing and sound judgement during the whole period of the operations in France have always been an inspiration to the men of his Coy and his services are well worthy of recognition.
